“ It's impossible for me to fully describe what Sue's friendship during the last 21 years has meant to me. I know I will never have another friend or friendship like the one she and I shared because to find one true friend in a lifetime is a rarity all by itself.

Sue never pretended to be someone she wasn't. Some of us get dressed up; wear a few pieces of jewelry, and nice shoes and temporarily become someone we are not comfortable being. Sue, on the other hand was herself, no matter the situation, Sue was Sue and I admired her for being true to herself and true to everyone she came in contact with.

She and I lead different lives in many ways and while she was one of the most unsettled persons I had ever known, she was my rock, she was the one thing I could count on.

There never was a time when I called on Sue that she was not there for me. No matter the time of day, no matter how trivial my whining was, no matter how wrong I was, Sue was listening, offering advice, and criticizing when necessary.

All she ever wanted was to be loved and all she ever tried to do was please those whom she loved. Every one of us has lost more than the last 5 days will allow us to comprehend and as we continue with our lives we will become more aware of this. I pray Sue is looking down on us now and knows exactly what a wonderful, one-of-a-kind woman she truly was and how our lives were blessed by knowing her.

I am so deeply hurt by her departure; we shared so many trials and tribulations, from ecstatic highs to life changing lows and because of this I want her back in my life - our story together wasn't finished, we were supposed to continue the chapters. And that is being selfish, extremely selfish. Sue is happy, she's content now, she has finally found peace and I so desperately hope she now knows how much she will be missed and how much she was loved.

Tonight before bed, I am going to light one of Sue's favorite candles, and to those of you who knew Sue as well as I did, you are also encouraged to light one up.

“ I knew Sue long and well enough to know that the one thing which I feel I can say with surety is, heaven has gained a benevolent heart and soul. I just know that she is on the ride, with silver bells, a blue sky, and a heart of gold, to a place where an entity's good intentions cannot be forsaken, tainted, or painted as bad. Her legacy, 3 beautiful children, will surely have a doting and loving guardian angel to look over them. An angel who in life wanted nothing more than the best for them. Rest easy Sue, the journey has lost it's arduousnes, but is certainly not over. I'm glad I got to say goodbye when I left the area and I'm glad we were cool with that which could not be changed. May her family, loved ones, and friends be at peace, find joy in life, and carry on with mine and my family's deepest condolences, and prayers.##imported-begin##Daniel Vannier and Family##imported-end##
